About us

Our architecture aims to lift the spirit, shift perspective, and amplify sensory experience. We want to enhance your connection to life, nature, art, and the greater whole.

Led by internationally accomplished architect, Anne Hindley, our studio's work is defined by its distilled simplicity; materials, textures, framed views, scale and light are all carefully considered to create elegant, arresting, and highly functional homes.

With over 20 years' experience, we have developed meticulous and comprehensive practice methodologies. Our collaborative and empathic approach ensures the needs of each client are heard and addressed to create an enjoyable, expertly managed process leading to a beautiful end result.

Sand Dune Sanctuary

A 1960's beach shack has been transformed into a simple but elegant holiday house. Contrasting materials and techniques have been employed to create a work that is luxurious and contemporary whilst retaining the relaxed modernist feel of the original.

Referencing modernist classics, unfilled travertine harmonises with the traditional limestone and sand dunes of the local Sorrento area.

The open and adjustable floor plan interlinks the social and private spaces. Light and privacy is regulated by utilising Japanese style sliding screens and natural linen sheer curtains. Custom architectural joinery enables flexibility of function and form. Modest and sophisticated, the classic references and timeless materials of interior design and architecture give this beachy residence longevity.

Albert Park House

Albert Park House is a dramatic and moody renovation of an original 1900s heritage-listed terrace in Albert Park. The Victorian bones of the house had some elegant features, but previous renovations had rendered the home utilitarian. We sought to revive the soul that had been lost.

We saw that the relationship between the house, studio and garden needed to be harmonised to all three's mutual benefit. Employing a few elementary techniques to declutter and simplify the previously fragmented layout allowed us to focus on the views from the interiors to the courtyard gardens.

Newtown House

Hindley & Co delicately preserved an emotional relationship to a family house, while enhancing the connection to its site. With a spectacular view over the Barwon River valley and Newtown parklands, we amplified engagement with its surrounding landscape.

Maintaining the original mid-century essence of the house was at the crux of the design, and we sought to pay homage to its charm and quirks with any new interventions. We have both retained and drawn inspiration from the best aspects of the old, whilst the new is now generous, contemporary and comfortable.
